Her Idea of Funeral Reform.

Lady Frederick Cavendish is a funeral reformer. At a meeting in London of an asso ciation devoted to this purpose she said that due respect for the dead body demanded that. when buried, it should be "laid into th earth" naturally and completely, and therefore there should be no durable coffin, n bricked grave and no cumbrous tombstone to prevent the air and the rain descending to the body to purity and dissolve it. Regard for the public health demanded that the body should be disposed of as not to hurt the living. There should be no unnecessary postponement of the burial, no undue exposure at the graveside in inclem ent weather, and no polsening of the soil, the water springs and the air by insanitary burial in vaults or overcrowded graves.

Fads and Fancies. Engagement cups and saucers continue to be one of the caprices of fashion. A novelty in a bonbonntere is a queer knotted piece of faignce, over which little harlequins play. A large Egyptian shaped vase, simple and severe in outline, with solid handles like wings, is one of the novelties. The spiral pedestals for jardinteres lead att the others. Italian perforated work is extremely handsome in wares of this sort.

More than one household in the city of New York contains a lapdog that is coddled and caressed, better fed and more tenderly cared for than the children in the family.

Bonbonnieres in laience imitate textiles. he handles are like knotted scarfs; the cor ners are gathered in and make a pretense of being tied. They are crumpled, are one-sided, and are everything but straight in line.

Queen of Hearts.

The Queen of Hearts All on a Summer's day; The Knave of hearts He stole those tarts.

The King of Hearts Called for the tarts. And beat the Knave full sore; The Knave of Hearts Brought tack the tarts. And vowed he'd steal no more,

Do You Know Your Letters ?

The chances are that you do not. Why has A its present shape? You do not know? takes its shape from a picture of an eagle. B was once the picture of an Egyptian bird. D represented a man's hand. If was the horned viper. The two upper strokes are the remains of the horus and the perpendicular line the upright body of the viper. H was once the semblance of a sieve. We had our letters from the Phornician alphabet, which in turn came from the hieroglyphic picture-writing of Egypt.
